

Great start to Australia Day

WHAT a great way to start Australia Day!

This year will see the Inverloch Surf Life Saving Club hold its second Australia Day 'Anderson Inlet 1.2km Swim Classic'.

After the success of last year's event with over 150 swimmers taking part, the club's special events manager George Misson is hoping for an even greater number of entrants this year.

Mr Misson said the amount of positive feedback he has received from last year's event is a good indicator that perhaps by word of mouth amongst the swimming fraternity, numbers certainly will be greater this year.

"The club not only uses the swim and their recent fun run to raise money for our much-needed new club house, we also want to promote ourselves in the community as more than just being a life saving club on the beach," Mr Misson said.

"It also offers locals along with the thousands of holiday makers who converge in the district another social activity where all members of the family can participate."

Entries are available on the day at the Inverloch Angling Club, and registrations open at 6.15am before the first bank of swimmers will hit the water at 7.30am.

Mr Misson said that the beach, lifesavers and swimming are such great Australian icons that there could be no better way to start Australia Day.

"Jump in and have a swim in Anderson's Inlet, followed by a barbecue at the angling club, another Australian icon!"

Competitors at last year's event can't wait to enter the water.
